

53% of hiring managers say it's difficult to find and retain millennials.

58% of millennials expect to leave their job in 3 years or less.

The millennial unemployment rate is 6% higher than the national average, yet hiring managers struggle to match their job openings with the skills of millennial applicants.

Do these challenges sound familiar at your company? If so, join the Employee Training Institute for a discussion led by Jennifer Hamilton, CEO of the Institute for Mastering Success, and talent development expert:

“Retaining and Managing the Millennial Generation” – a Workshop for HR Professionals & Managers

As millennial workers now make up the majority of our workforce as of 2015, they are bringing exciting new skills and aptitudes to companies, as well as distinct HR and management challenges. Attend this workshop to learn how to maximize the strengths and contributions of your millennials, and learn how your current HR practices can be tweaked and updated in order to work with a multi-generational workforce. Specifically we will cover:

- How to motivate millennials and other multi-generational employees to increase productivity, engagement and loyalty
- As an HR professional, how to take new supervisory strategies back to your team and share with leaders & managers
- Which of the 8 different ways do you think and process information to make completing and delegating work easier

Jennifer Hamilton has over 20 years of business, team management and teaching experience ranging from consulting at Pricewaterhousecoopers (PwC) and Moss Adams, to teaching and training professionals on behalf of the California Department of Education, DeVry University's Becker CPA Review, and Grossmont College. As CEO of the Institute for Mastering Success, she escalates teams by training on the art and science of relationships between managers and their staff within professional and technical fields.
